

SIMON HSIEH

Employee Profile

Project Captain Simon Hsieh arrived at TLCD Architecture last June with a broad knowledge of international design and construction. Simon earned a degree in Civil Engineering in Taiwan and graduated with honors in Architecture from Arizona State University. He has worked as a surveyor, cost estimator, computer programmer, and construction administrator while in Taiwan. Since coming to the United States, he has shifted his focus to design. He has won two design awards and received four design excellence awards through school and anticipated school, City Hall and NAAB design exhibitions.

Simon grew up in rural Taiwan 30 minutes (today's travel time) outside of Taipei. His father was highly involved with organic gardening —a practice that Simon continues to evolve today. Among his other interests, Simon is a competitive fly fisherman. For the past four years, Simon has placed in an international casting competition ("Spey-o-Rama") in Golden Gate Park, and has taken the championship title two years running. When he's not competing, Simon finds himself catching Steelhead in Clearwater, Idaho and the North Umpque River in Oregon.

Simon currently lives in Sebastopol with his wife and 5-year-old son Conner. He and his wife enjoy studying Buddhist philosophy in the community and getting out into nature. Simon speaks Mandarin, Taiwanese, and English and is a great asset to the Healthcare team.
